Chapter 1 by Unkie

Dr William Renwalt was doing volunteer work in several African Villages curing ailments, delivering babies, and performing much needed surgeries for the locals. After doing as much as he could, he was ready to head back to his practice in Virginia.

He threw his luggage in the hold of the bus and carried his medical bag with him to his seat. The bus was cramed with people, every seat taken and chickens and goats were in the walkway. It was a hot day and the smell of sweat, urine, and fecal matter from the animals was sickening. Dr Bill, as he was called, reached into his bag and grabbed the smelling salts, "anything would be better to sniff than this" he thought.

The bus driver turned his head and yelled out "only about an hour and a half to go". He turned his head back to the road and there in front of him were some wildebeest. As he sharply turned the steering wheel and slammed on his brakes, he clipped two of them causing the bus to roll over onto it's side.

Chapter 2 by Jannie Rae

Everything was in turmoil and passengers were moaning in pain. Dr Bill grabbed his case and as usual attended to the needs of the sick and injured. The bus driver repeatedly say he was sorry. Then some people began shouting that police was rolling up and that everyone needed to exit the bus any way possible. Dr Bill was the last to exit the bus. He was the last to exit the bus. He was the last to exit the bus.

Chapter 3 by Captain

The bus situation became frantic, people running around screaming, people climbing over each other to get out.

"Calm down!" Screamed Dr. Bill

But it got worse, The petrol caught on fire.

Chapter 4 by Jannie Rae

There were still people left inside the bus. The bus driver hurried to it to try to help people out before it blew up. He was a real hero. He pulled a young teenager, a mother and her small child and was trying to pull an elderly man to safety when the bus blew up like a bomb. The bus driver, the man he was helping, and another person died instantly.

Chapter 5 by ThunderRising

The real panic had started. People were screaming and shouting. They tried to get out but the bus driver was dead so nobody could figure out how to open the doors. Worst of all, the passengers were stuck in the middle of the forest with no internet connection or service.

Chapter 6 by 311i3

Dr Bill ran around frantically with his medical kit, tending to the injured. People saw the good doctor and started helping. They led the others away from the burning pieces of the bus. Dr Bill looked grim as he worked, his face and coat covered in dirt. This guy had his left arm and leg burnt badly by the explosion. The doctor ripped a piece of his coat and wrapped it around the man's 2 burnt limbs.

The injured man grabbed Dr Bill's arm as he packed up his medical kit. "Thank..you", the man gasped. Dr William Renwalt smiled. He looked at the sky, and saw the sun setting. Others looked up at the sky as well, but in fear.

They were in the forest. And night was approaching.

Chapter 7 by Unkte

"We need to find shelter before the animals will be hunting" "What animals?" "Wolves, lions, tigers, and hyenas..." "Oh I NO... Elephants...and the..."

Chapter 8 by Jannie Rae

The elephants charged right through the area we were standing. Someone yelled that there was a river and that we should run and jump into it, which is what we did. That was worse. Most of us we eaten by alligators while the others that didn't make the river were trampled. I'm lucky I survived. "Oh No"? "Something has latched onto my leg"! "It's a PYTHON"
GASP...Gasp.....gasp.
